News from the Continental Toy Library Associations:

Americas Group

AT the 2017 ITLA Conference in Holland, a proposal was made to create an Americas Continental Group. Representatives from Argentina and Brazil were present in support of ITLA President Monica Juarez's proposal. Maria Celia M. de Oliveira from Brazil is leading the effort that began on June 2017

Mission:

To mobilize toy librarians (and other entities devoted to play and childhood) to join the working group in order to promote the movement of toy libraries in America.

Purposes:

- To promote communication between this group and ITLA's Board, sharing regional needs and initiatives along with ITLA
- To exchange experiences and knowledge from various regions and spheres of influence (private, public, & community) that will be represented in the group;

- To produce guiding documents describing purposes, functions, and the operation of toy libraries as well as the development of the toy librarian.
- To promote and support actions of social impact, policies specifically defending of the rights of children, promote and the overall health of this population.

Guiding values:

- To defend the right of children to a healthy and dignified childhood;
- To highlight the importance of play to quality of life at all ages; -To stimulate the creation of playrooms and recreate the welfare of communities;
- To promote projects that offer all children a chance to play.

Representatives of 6 countries have now joined the ITLA AMERICA group. Please like our Facebook page: <https://www.facebook.com/groups/138827043521566/>

World Play Day for Malaysia took place on Saturday, June 9, 2018

Free Play was everywhere, with the smiles, laughter, and excitement of children joining in to play! Families were treated to many surprises and fun-filled games and activities at play stations both in and outdoors. The water play station

-Children were gallant knights of King Arthur, fulfilling their dreams in cardboard armour as they advanced on castles .

The most popular stations were the shredded paper box and cardboard painting, where children unleashed the practicing to be the next Picasso.

Children were also busy with their cars at the speed station, where toilet paper rolls, bubble wrap, cardboard were used to create racing ramps and tunnels. Zoom!

The technology and 3D station was filled with excitement and curiosity as both children and parents experienced how a deca die is printed using a 3D printer.

It was a wonderful day out for about 600 families and children. Sponsors included IKEA, AJ Pharma, Positive Parenting, Subway, and many others.

Our Environmental Responsibility

Apart from the educational and developmental benefits of borrowing toys, all toy libraries are also : environment. Reducing landfill waste, teaching children about the sharing economy, and combattin are all fundamental lessons for children to learn.

Why should you stock wooden toys?

Take a look at this list of reasons why wooden toys stay classic and are always the best option

Wooden Toys Are Tough.

It will take more than the weight of your little one to break that wooden toy truck down. Unlike plastic toys which or chip, wooden toys are built to last longer. The fact that most wooden toys are handmade helps ensure that the quality standards of craftsmanship. This is precisely the reason why, with a bit of care, wooden toys can become Wooden Toys Stimulate Your Child's Imagination.

Without the fancy voice, sound and lighting effects common to certain types of plastic toys, wooden toys are simple. Instead of feeding your child's mind with stimulus from sound and light, it is your child that will have to use his imagination. When your child's mind is engaged, and it will be your child who will be directing the play, not the other way around.

Pretend play is very important for your child's development of creative, social, emotional, language, thinking and skills which are all fundamental to their growth.

Wooden Toys Are Sustainably Made.

Taking your household on the eco-friendly route? Starting with your child's toys is a great way to plant the seeds of environmental responsibility in him in a fun and creative way. Wooden toys are made from sustainable sources bearing the Forest Stewardship Council's (FSC) seal of approval. So even if you dispose of your child's wooden toys, you can either give them a second life or recycle them without any fear of adding to the burden on landfills.

Wooden Toys Help Develop Fine Motor Skills.

Wooden toys challenge children's sense of order, coordination, agility, and balance. If your child is playing with wooden blocks in odd shapes and sizes, he has to find a way to organize them so that they don't fall off or collapse. Children learn to master those little fingers and hands in order to build a tall tower, knowing how a little bit of extra pressure can cause the whole tower tumbling down.

Unlike plastic toy cars, wooden toy models are usually weightier so your child will also need to exert more effort to get the wheels turning. Getting a wooden toy car to move is a lesson in coordination and strength. Your child learns to apply the right amount of pressure and energy to move the wooden toy car to achieve the desired speed. And since your child is the one in control of the cord attached to the car, for example, he/she learns to navigate his way around, over, and under obstacles.

Wooden Toys Are Cheaper In The Long Term.

Finally, some parents shy away from wooden toys thinking that plastic ones are a cheaper alternative. So not true because of their durability (and safety), wooden toys are definitely a more practical purchase. What's more, wood teach your child so many things that plastic toys simply cannot. Wooden toys remain a classic simply because they enliven your child's time for hours on end with educational and highly imaginative, creative play.
